FEELING PRESENT IN THE PHYSICAL WORLD AND IN COMPUTER-MEDIATED ENVIRONMENTS (PALGRAVE STUDIES IN CYBERPSYCHOLOGY)

JOHN WATERWORTH AND GIUSEPPE RIVA

Our experience of the physical world around us, and of the social environments in which we function, is increasingly mediated by information and communication technology, which is itself evolving ever more rapidly and pervasively. This book presents a coherent and detailed account of why we experience feelings of being present in the physical world and in computer-mediated environments, why we often don't, and why it matters - for design, psychotherapy, tool use and social creativity amongst other practical applications. Since the extent to which presence is experienced in a technology-mediated interactive context can be manipulated by design, and in almost unlimited ways, we can use explorations with mediated presence to provide new insights into the psychology of presence in both the physical and technology-mediated worlds.
